“My A.L.M. Management degree changed how I think about nonprofits and made me a much better professional. The case model we used was the greatest thing for me and forever changed how I think about work. Being the only Extension School student selected to sit on the Hauser Center for Nonprofits at the Kennedy School I saw first hand how fellow future alumni feel about the Extension School and how misunderstood it is within Harvard. I believe the Extension School brand needs real help. It needs to be elevated internally at Harvard and outside of Cambridge. I want to help do that. I want to help be a change agent. I have been able to help turnaround many nonprofit brands and I want to use those skills on the Alumni Board. I truly hope I am chosen to serve as the person that can help recruit new talent to the board. I think that having new like-minded alumni involved that have a passion for wanting to help change and improve the Harvard Extension School will be a big help in these efforts”.
