

Dan Ferrell ALB '15

Dan Ferrell is a technology strategist leading the transformation of clinical operations and health records management for the NeuroRestorative and CareMeridian organizations who provide post-acute rehabilitation services for those with acquired and traumatic brain and spinal cord injuries.

Since completing his ALB in 2015, Dan has sought to engage in the broader Harvard alumni community and specifically the HEAA. He seeks to engage his fellow alumni and encourage others to engage as well. Dan hopes to help celebrate fellow alumni via the awards and recognition committee by spotlighting those who have contributed significantly in their field, are working to disrupt and transform their fields and those who have already impacted the Harvard community. He hopes that the awards and recognition process also provides a platform for alumni to share the influence of the Harvard Extension School on their lives and careers.

“I want to fully engage in our Extension School alumni community while helping recognize the accomplishments of my fellow alumni. I would seek to broaden the scope of alumni who nominate their fellow alumni to recognize those from various industries and fields of practice. Additionally I would work to educate alumni in the awards process to encourage more people to nominate their fellow alumni”.

Dan and his husband David, the Director of Alumni and Student Professional Development Programs at the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health, live in the South End neighborhood in Boston.
